

Foreword to part VI Unification

A specialist is someone who knows more and more about less and less until he knows absolutely everything about practically nothing at all.

William Mayo, extended by Nicholas Butler.

We assume the converse is A generalist is someone who knows less and less about more and more until he knows practically nothing at all about absolutely everything.

The unification of physics is particularly difficult because we need to be a specialist and a generalist at the same time.
