

The Constitution of the British Community

The name of the organisation is 'the British Community'. Unless it begins a sentence 'the' does not begin in upper case. The initials of British Community are BC.

The BC is a conceptual overarching structure. When it has subsidiary parts, even autonomous ones, they are referred to individually and qualified as in the BC.

The BC is not a registered organisation under UK law.

The purpose of the BC is to provide services to parts of the UK where it is envisaged they will break down under hard Brexit.

The BC is an administrative structure and not a political party.
