

The Nazis since 1945

In April 1945 one of Hitler's doubles (there were 11 in the Reich, 7 were sent to Berlin at this time) after shooting Hitler's German Shepherd Blondi, committed suicide in the bunker. This convinced some of its staff. The Russians found the buried (and unburnt) corpse of a double of Adolf Hitler near the bunker, exhumed on 2 May, 1945.

Hitler left the bunker in Berlin with Eva Braun and their German Shepherd Wulf via a network of tunnels that linked the bunker with the underground on 22 April 1945. They were taken by Junkers aircraft to Switzerland. There was then an airlift of high-ranking Nazi personnel, gold and strategic materials from Switzerland to Spain, where Hitler had been met by Franco. The Gestapo chief Heinrich Mueller told his US interrogators in 1948 that he arranged Hitler's escape from Berlin and that Hitler together with Eva Braun flew to Barcelona, Spain, on 26 April 1945. From there three Junkers aircraft took them on to Ascension and Argentina, where Nazi finance had installed Perón the year before. Some of the gold was later sent back from Argentina to Switzerland, where being Argentinian property it could not be touched.

Soviet Marshall J. Stalin in 1945 told many Allied leaders that Hitler escaped Berlin. When Truman asked Stalin at the Potsdam Conference in August 1945 whether Hitler was dead, Stalin replied bluntly "No".

There was never an identifiable corpse of Adolf Hitler nor of Eva Braun. A skull fragment with a bullet hole, held by the Red Army intelligence agency SMERSH, was for decades believed to be that of Hitler. In 2009 samples of the skull were DNA tested at the University of Connecticut. The sample was found to be that of a woman aged under 40, not 56, Hitler's reported age of death. In 1970 KGB director Yuri Andropov, who became General Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union in November 1982 until his death in February 1984, authorised the destruction of the remains that had been buried at Magdeberg on 21 February 1946.

The whole suicide story rests solely on the concocted testimony of four fanatical Nazis.

Hitler's residence was at a remote ranch in Argentina, with mod. cons. and a good climate. It was impossible to get out by road, taking some days to get out by river and some hours to fly.

A declassified CIA document #HVCA-2592 dated 3 October 1955 describes how former SS trooper Phillip Citroen informed CIA agents in 1954 that Hitler under the pseudonym Adolf Schüttelmayer using the Nazi exfiltration network had left by U-boat to South America via Tenerife and left for Argentina from Columbia in January 1955. In this Nazi disinformation a photo of Schüttelmayer, complete with Hitler moustache, and Citroen was taken at "Residences Coloniales", overly populated by former Nazis, in Tunga, Columbia, in 1954. According to Citroen, he was addressed as Elder Führer, and afforded Nazi salutes and storm-trooper adulation. Pictures of Hitler in this period show him alternating between a stubbly moustache and no moustache at all. Although it is feasible that Hitler could have travelled from his ranch in Argentina to Columbia and back, Schüttelmayer is not Hitler. Nor is the assertion that he escaped by U-boat. Abel Basti, an Argentinian journalist, wrote a book "Tras los pasos de Hitler" that traced the movements of Schüttelmayer throughout South America, especially Columbia.

Hitler lived to see the moon landings, and died at the age of 88. I am told Eva Braun divorced him and they had three sons. If any of them are not fascists, I wish them well. Even if that is not so, you are independent of your father and not the same person. I accept you.

Speer was released from Spandau in 1966. When I spoke to him in 1971, I suggested Hitler's body had been frozen. This date is a computation. I thought it was rather later, but I would have had to make special arrangements to go to Hull, which had then become completely unusual, and I have no verification of what I am saying or even whether it is feasible that Speer ever went to Hull at all. It may have been there was a notification that he was making a talk, and I made special arrangements to go to it to see what I thought was an interesting historical figure, and for him to explain to me his extraordinary behaviour in supporting Hitler, who I regarded as one of the most evil monsters in history, when Speer seemed quite rational, and indeed I thought of Speer of being quite able to behave ethically. I think that the meeting was closed, and there was no possibility of me attending it. Basically, I have forgotten, and there is the distinct possibility that all this is a fantasy. There is the additional uncomfortable fact that at that time, my mental state was not what it should be, which I regret to admit was severe, and I think that this also should be taken into consideration. Some features of the conversation seem fact, but I was not sure I was speaking to Speer at all. There had been articles about Speer in the newspapers, and I had latched on to the fact of a connection of various experiences described by Speer there, and his suggestion of electric blue, I think for some occasion, possibly it was a suit. It may be the case that I thought the person was wearing an electric blue shirt, or maybe a tie. I was never contradicted in the conversation that it was Speer, and I had seen photographs of him in the newspaper. I would have thought that, my memory being that I addressed him by name in the beginning, he would have denied he was Speer, and that I was mistaken. Speer seemed surprised and said he hadn't known. There may even have been cognitive mismatch and he corrected me and said there were plans to do that. I would have been unable to process that at the time, and certainly until now I have ignored it. On recollection that is the case, but I do not know how I would be able to remember such detail. I would have thought it was very likely that Speer would have known that Hitler had moved to Argentina. Since I have read none of his three books, and at the time was not interested in the subject, I am unable to infer any further information on this. At the time I did not know that Hitler was in Argentina anyway, and it arose from our subsequent short conversation that he knew my purported knowledge of facts was ridiculous. Since we are informed Hitler died at the age of 88, so my calculations make that 1983, this has implications. It means Speer may have been able to convey this idea to the ranch, or whatever it was called, in Argentina. Since the ranch was defended by very sophisticated equipment unavailable to the US or the Soviet Union, it would be feasible that Hitler would decide that, considering the advanced technology available to him and his command of vast resources, it was quite possible to have his body frozen in the subsequent expectation that medical advances would be developed to resuscitate him. Whether that occurred or not, I do not know.

I would have thought that Majorana would have wanted to be in on the act too, were that the case.

If this were not a fantasy, the evil thought has occurred to me that if this resuscitation were delayed even to beyond today, or perhaps this has already happened, in the expectation that advanced techniques are available for a full and complete recovery, so the Führer could ascend once more in command of the World System, that techniques of advanced torture have been, and will presumably become, available in the interim, so that were it possible to breach security these techniques could be applied to him to insure this behaviour never occurs again.

It has occurred to me also that the supreme test of an ethical and moral system is that it is applied in the most severe circumstances. So even if this is a fantasy, or even if it is not, we must reflect, an idea taken from physics, as a thought experiment what our behaviour should be in these circumstances. When confronted with pure evil, if we respond with compassion, then I believe our social and ethical constitution, as expressed in ourselves and the systems of social control that surround us, is sufficient to allow human civilisation to ascend to new heights of development, and we can proceed under the assumption that our moral system is sufficient to begin contacts possibly with other civilisations beyond our own, located in stars beyond our own, who would possibly wish to meet us and to converse with us in an exchange of knowledge and endeavours, but are rightly fearful of our irrational behaviour and our innate vicious violence, which up to now we have not seen apparently within ourselves, any deep organised commitment to curb or control.
